RBC Select Choices Growth Portfolio

Commentary

- ▶ Over the past three months, the RBC Select Choices Growth Portfolio declined 9.6%.
- ▶ A global economic slowdown triggered by the credit crunch pushed stocks in most regions around the world into bear-market territory. Along the way, Lehman Brothers filed for bankruptcy protection, and Merrill Lynch and AIG lost their independence. Only now, with a passage of a U.S. government plan to cleanse balance sheets of toxic mortgage-linked securities, will credit markets begin to unclog.
- ▶ This flare-up over the health of the financial system and economic growth resulted in a massive risk aversion which caused bond yields to plunge in a near straight-line fashion during the quarter. Investors fled anything that seemed the least bit risky and rushed toward the relative safety of Treasury bonds, resulting in outperformance of fixed-income funds. The top-performing fixed-income fund was the TD Canadian Bond Fund, which declined 1.2%, followed by the RBC Bond Fund with a decline of 2.4% during the period.
- ▶ A concern over the possibility of a looming recession resulted in a massive sell-off in commodity stocks. Previous sector leaders such as Energy, Materials and Industrials have declined significantly, sending the resource laden S&P/TSX Composite Index lower by 18.2% since the beginning of the quarter. The Fidelity Canadian Disciplined Equity Fund fell 20.5%, while the Harbour Fund relatively outperformed, finishing 11.2% lower.
- ▶ The U.S. economy has been one of the hardest hit by the financial crisis. Nevertheless, U.S. equity markets have outperformed most global stock markets during the quarter. The S&P 500 Index fell 4.5%, in Canadian dollar terms. The RBC O'Shaughnessy U.S. Growth Fund lagged the group falling 14.9%, while the RBC O'Shaughnessy U.S. Value Fund declined 5.5% and was the best performing U.S. fund during the quarter.
- ▶ International markets also trended lower as the outlook for the global economy deteriorated. The top-performing international fund was the Mackenzie Ivy Foreign Equity Fund, which fell 0.3%, followed by the AGF European Equity Fund, down 6.1% during the quarter. All funds within the international component outperformed the benchmark MSCI EAFE Total Return Index, which declined 16.8% in Canadian dollar terms.
