RBC Select Balanced Portfolio

Commentary

- ▶ Over the past three months, the RBC Select Balanced Portfolio declined 8.9%.
- ▶ A global economic slowdown triggered by the credit crunch pushed stocks in most regions around the world into bear-market territory, while yields on government bonds plunged. Along the way, Lehman Brothers filed for bankruptcy protection, and Merrill Lynch and AIG lost their independence. Only now, with a passage of a U.S. government plan to cleanse balance sheets of toxic mortgage-linked securities, will credit markets begin to unplug.
- ▶ The flare-up over the health of the financial system and economic growth resulted in a massive risk aversion which caused investors to seek the safety of Treasury bonds. During the quarter, the top-performing fund was the RBC Canadian Short-Term Income Fund, with a gain of 0.5%, followed by a 0.3% advance in the RBC Global Bond Fund.
- ▶ A concern over the possibility of a looming recession resulted in a massive sell-off in commodity stocks. Previous sector leaders such as Energy, Materials, and Industrials have declined significantly, sending the resource laden S&P/TSX Composite Index lower by 18.2% since the beginning of the quarter. Among the funds in this group, the RBC Canadian Equity Fund fell 18.4%, while the RBC Canadian Dividend Fund finished 8.2% lower, supported by the strength in the Financials sector which advanced 2.6%.
- ▶ The U.S. economy has been one of the hardest hit by the financial crisis. Nevertheless, U.S. equity markets have outperformed most global stock markets during the quarter. The overweight position in the Portfolio added value as the S&P 500 Index relatively outperformed, falling 4.5%, in Canadian dollar terms. The RBC U.S. Equity Fund weighed on overall performance as the fund underperformed the Index falling 11.0%, in Canadian dollars.
- ▶ International markets also trended lower as the outlook for the global economy deteriorated. The top-performing international fund was the RBC Global Dividend Growth Fund, which fell 15.1%, followed by the RBC Asian Equity Fund, down 15.4% during the quarter. All funds within the international component outperformed the benchmark MSCI EAFE Total Return Index, which declined 16.8% in Canadian dollar terms.
